YOUR PROBLEMS
by Ann Landers

'Half of Goofy Twosome Was Man'

Dear Ann Landers: That letter from "Married to a Ham" should not be taken lightly. You suggested that the wife should get interested in the hobby, too. I knew a fellow who taught his wife to operate his ham radio and it almost broke up two marriages.

Mrs. Y. started a cozy little talk-romance with a guy from Enid, Okla. They began to mail pictures back and forth. The next thing anybody knew, Mrs. Y. took off for Enid. A few weeks later, the guy from Enid came up to see Mrs. Y. These two psycho-ceramics (crackpots) spent four whole days together — "getting acquainted," they said.

Fortunately, no divorces took place. The people involved finally got squared away with the help of a couple of clergymen.

So you see, Ann, women don't really belong in the ham radio field. It should be strictly for men.—AGAINST HALF-BAKED LADY HAMS

Dear Half Baked: You forget that half of this goofy twosome was a man: Characters like Mrs. Y. and Mr. Enid could have met on a street car, so don't blame the hobby.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently I went into one of the finest department stores in the city. A clock which I had purchased there several months ago needed repair. I encountered a line of seven people ahead of me at the repair desk.

There was only one girl on duty and that flea brain couldn't have cared less about the customers. She was busily engaged in a telephone conversation with her boyfriend. Her back was toward the customers but the conversation was audible to everyone in 10 feet.

The girl was on the phone exactly 12 minutes, by my watch. Three customers were angry enough to leave. I waited. It took me 22 minutes to drop off that clock.

My husband who was waiting outside was fit to be tied. What would you have done?—ONLY HUMAN

Dear Only: After waiting 5 minutes for the girl to get off the horn, I would have hunted up the floor manager and invited him over to the repair counter for a listen.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 13-year-old girl who made a terrible mistake. Two weeks ago I put peroxide in the water when I washed my hair. Not just a little peroxide—a whole lot. I meant for my hair to be a few shades lighter, but it turned out much lighter than I expected.
